1. Introduction

- 1.1. The effective management of records in all formats depends as much on their efficient and timely disposal as on their long-term preservation. Effective management of records will not only facilitate access to information but will also have a positive effect on the working environment. The Record Retention Policy is based on common practice and applicable legislative or regulatory requirements.

2. Purpose

- 2.1. The UK General Data Protection Regulation (UKGDPR) Article 5(1e – states that Personal Data shall be kept in a form which permits identification of data subjects for no longer than is necessary for the purposes for which the personal data are processed; personal data may be stored for longer periods insofar as the personal data will be processed solely for archiving purposes in the public interest, scientific or historical research purposes or statistical purposes in accordance with Article 89(1) subject to implementation of the appropriate technical and organisational measures required by this Regulation in order to safeguard the rights and freedoms of the data subject (storage limitation);

For example, when an employee or Board Member leaves Waverley Housing, or a tenant terminates their tenancy with us, their personal details will not necessarily be deleted immediately as they may be required in the future for the provision of references or the defence of possible legal claims. Generally, under this Principle, personal data will be deleted when the relevant statutory or good practice time limit has expired and in accordance with our published Records Retention Periods.

- 2.2. No personal detail is of sufficient interest to be archived indefinitely, the General Data Protection Regulation makes it an offence to retain personal data for longer than is necessary and it must therefore be disposed of in the correct retention timeframe.
- 2.3. Waverley Housing has clearly defined policies and procedures for the retention and disposal of records. To ensure compliance, Waverley Housing has established a Records Retention Schedule which details record types held by all areas of the organisation and retention periods.

3. Responsibilities

- 3.1. All Managers are responsible for supporting and monitoring staff record keeping procedures and the Data Protection Officer (DPO) will monitor that records are destroyed in accordance with our Records Retention periods.
- 3.2. All Employees and Board Members are responsible for ensuring that all records created in the course of their work are reliable and accurate and retained for the appropriate length of time in accordance with our Records Retention periods.

4. The Length of the Retention Period

- 4.1. The length of time a record is retained depends on the type of record, its importance to Waverley Housing and any relevant legislation governing it.
- 4.2. The Records Retention Schedule takes account of these legal and regulatory requirements and sets out recommended retention periods. As a rule of thumb, most complaint records should be kept for a minimum of six years, which is generally the time limit within which civil claims can be brought.

Records may be retained for longer periods when they:

- a) Need to be retained because the information contained in them is relevant to legal action which has been started or is pending. It is the responsibility of the service area to provide information on pending legal action. If such action is pending, a note should be attached to the file stating that the records should not be destroyed. Electronic records, where possible, should be flagged to prevent erasure.
- b) Are required to be kept longer by statute. A number of Acts and regulations govern the retention of certain types of records.
- c) Are archived for historical purposes.
- d) Consist of a sample of records maintained for the purpose of retrospective comparison.
- e) Relate to individuals and providers of service who have, or whose staff have, been judged unsatisfactory.
- f) Are held in order to provide, for the subject, aspects of his/her personal history.
- g) Relate to contracts 'under seal' between Waverley Housing and a private company.
- h) Where records require to be archived and password protected, encrypted, where systems do not allow for deletion.

5. Making a Decision to Destroy or Archive

- 5.1. Once records no longer serve their original purpose, they are either transferred to archives or destroyed. Some records have fixed retention periods whilst others will need more careful consideration.
- 5.2. All records should have 'owners'. These owners are responsible for ensuring the data is accurate, and is either archived or destroyed in accordance with the Retention Schedule. Record owners should make sure that all records are periodically and routinely reviewed to decide what can be disposed of whilst considering relevant guidance. The frequency of the review depends upon the retention period as specified in the Retention Periods Schedule.
- 5.3. In order to ensure the records Retention Policy works effectively, each section needs to have systems in place for managing records and for recording the decisions made.

6. Making Arrangements to Destroy or Archive

- 6.1. Most records must be destroyed as soon as practicable after the expiry of the relevant minimum retention period; these are usually identified following a review. However, there are other options. As a permanent destruction of records is an irreversible act, it is vital to consider all the options and get the decision right.

- 6.2. If physical storage space is an issue, records can be scanned from paper to computer. This option is advisable where, according to the Retention Periods Schedule, records have longer than average retention periods.
- 6.3. Though not common, records of potential historical significance or those that need to be kept indefinitely should be placed in archive in a separate storage facility.

7. Rules on Destruction

- 7.1. A significant number of our records contain sensitive or confidential information. It is vital that confidentiality is safeguarded at every stage and that the method used to destroy such records is fully effective.
- 7.2. Destruction is normally carried out onsite using in-house shredding machines. Alternatively, an approved contractor may be used for larger quantities of documents to be securely disposed of also onsite, and in these instances written evidence should be obtained from the supplier as proof of destruction prior to documents being removed from the building. Copies of documentation from the approved contractor should be saved into the appropriate folder.
- 7.3. If a record for destruction is known to be the subject of a request for information, destruction should be delayed until disclosure has taken place, or, if Waverley Housing has decided not to disclose the information, until the complaint and appeal provisions of the relevant legislation have been exhausted.

8. Training

- 8.1. Operational Managers will be responsible for training their staff in handling, filing and disposal of documents.

9. Retention Periods Schedule

- 9.1. It will be the responsibility of the Data Protection Officer (DPO) to provide and populate a Record Retention Schedule (see Appendix 1) showing the recommended retention period for all the records, both physical and electronic, held by Waverley Housing.
